

City of Tacoma and Puyallup Tribe of Indians

28 November 2018

Members of the Landmarks Preservation Commission:

On October 2, 2018, the Tacoma City Council, with full support and cooperation with the Puyallup Tribe of Indians, adopted Resolution No. 40122 (see attachment A) that, in part, directs City staff to initiate the process of naming the bridge which extends from Puyallup Avenue across the Puyallup River to Fife with a name recognizing the Puyallup Tribe's current and historical presence. The purpose of this letter is to request that the bridge be named Fishing Wars Memorial Bridge and the roadway across the bridge be renamed Fishing Wars Memorial Crossing.

The roadway on the bridge deck is currently known as "Eells Street." Eells Street runs from the Portland Avenue intersection across the Puyallup River to the city of Tacoma's corporate boundary with the city of Fife (see attachment B for exact street). The bridge is commonly referred to as the Puyallup River bridge, Puyallup Avenue bridge or the Eells Street bridge. A photo of the bridge is attachment C.

Applicable Criteria

The Puyallup Tribe and City of Tacoma staff worked together, as guided by the below criteria outlined in Section 7 of the City's Policy on Place Names and Name Changes, to select Fishing Wars Memorial Bridge and Fishing Wars Memorial Crossing to replace Eells and the other common references to the bridge.

Criteria #2: Context and geographical location

Sites and facilities should be given names that directly reflect or are contextually related to the history of the site.

The Puyallup Avenue Bridge is located within the boundaries of the Puyallup Reservation, home of the Puyallup Tribe of Indians, or the spuyaləpabš, meaning "generous and welcoming behavior to all people (friends and strangers) who enter our lands."

The Bridge is located near multiple historic Puyallup village sites.

The Bridge is located above the Ceremonial Grounds used by the Tribe for the annual First Fish Ceremony which welcomes the return of the salmon to the Puyallup River.

Criteria #4: Historical Significance

A facility may be given a name based on historical significance if it meets one of the following criteria:

- a. The name is associated with an historically significant event or for events reflecting broad patterns of Tacoma's history.

The Puyallup Avenue Bridge is the location of perhaps the most critical struggle to ever face the Puyallup Tribe. During the 1960's and 70's, the Tribe fought to secure their tribal fishing rights to fish the waters of their homeland, as guaranteed by the Medicine Creek Treaty of 1854.

The Puyallup and other treaty tribe spent 150 years defending these rights on the waters of Western Washington and in courtrooms across the country, the Puyallup Avenue Bridge being the forefront of this battle. By the first half of the 20th century, tribal fishing was so vigorously prohibited that fishing by tribal members had nearly stopped. Puyallup tribal fishermen that continued to fish in their usual and accustomed places to provide for their families and support their traditional livelihood, were routinely arrested, had their gear confiscated, were beaten, and dragged by their hair from the river. As the violence increased, clashes between tribal members and law enforcement escalated, resulting in riots. The bridge is the site of some of the most intense clashes between law enforcement, protestors, and the tribal members. (see attachment D, Seattle Times, September 9, 1970).

Recognizing this event and where it historically took place is a critical element to reconciliation between the Tribe and the City.

Plans for Interpretive Measures

The bridge and roadway will also bear the name yabuk'wali meaning "place of a fight" in Twulshootseed, the Puyallup Tribe official and aboriginal language. This name will be displayed and interpreted along with its historic significance on a plaque affixed in an accessible location on the bridge. This project will help to promote the revitalization of the Twulshootseed language. It will also commemorate a deeply meaningful tribal connection, both historical and cultural, to the City of Tacoma, a history that is often not taught in classrooms or acknowledged in the non-native community.

Public Outreach

The intent to name the bridge and roadway was first announced publicly with the Tacoma City Council adoption of Resolution No. 40122 on October 2. Public comments were heard on the resolution that night. In addition, property owners abutting Eells Street and the bridge were directly notified via letter in mid-November of the proposed name change. There are a total of fifteen abutting property owners. A list of those owners is in Attachment E. Six of the property owners are associated with the Puyallup Tribe or the City of Tacoma. Three of the abutting properties are addressed as "Eells Street".

Please direct questions or inquiries about this proposal to Alisa O'Hanlon, City of Tacoma Government Relations Office, (253) 591-5310 or alisa.ohanlon@cityoftacoma.org and Jennifer Keating, Puyallup Tribe of Indians, (253) 382-6073 or Jennifer.m.keating@puyalluptribe-nsn.gov.

Shots fired, 60 arrested in Indian-fishing showdown

TACOMA — (AP) — Four shots were fired today, as a partly strung fishing net was confiscated following an armed confrontation here between members of the Puyallup Tribe and Tacoma police and state officials on the Puyallup River. About 55 adults and 5 juveniles were arrested, police said.

Police used tear gas and State Game Department officials used clubs to break up a force of about 30 Indians armed with guns, knives and fire bombs on the west end of the Burlington Northern Railroad bridge, just north of the old Highway 99 bridge across the river.

Officials of the State Fisheries Department used a small boat to detach the net from the railroad bridge. The Indians fired four warning shots into the water near the boat before police and game officials converged on them.

Fisheries officials had said the Indians, who have been setting nets in the river since July 22, are fishing with illegal nets and equipment.

The Indians contend that they have the right to fish on the Puyallup under the Medicine Creek Treaty, signed in 1854 with the federal government.

J. E. Laster, assistant director of fisheries, said the "enforcement action" began early today.

An Indian who called himself Many Dog Hides and who is head of the encampment security guards said about 25 state fisheries people drove within about 300 yards of the camp at 6:30 a. m. and stayed about 45 minutes.

They left and returned about 9:30 a. m. with Tacoma police, State Game Department people and Prosecuting Attorney Ronald Hendry.

Police stationed men on top of the Old 99 bridge. Two police cars and several state game cars arrived on the east side of the river. About 50 state game people with Hendry and a few police officers lined up ready to cross the railroad bridge.

About 25 police officers moved in.

One Indian threw a fire bomb on the railroad bridge to hold back the state game men moving across the bridge with clubs. The bomb apparently set off a blaze which damaged the bridge.

Before the confrontation, police warned the Indians several times over a loudspeaker to lay down their arms and peaceably leave the area.

But the Indians countered that they had a right to fish on "our" land.

"If anyone lays a hand on that net, they are going to get shot," said Ramona Bennett, a member of the Puyallup Tribal Council.

"It's a sad thing we have to bring guns out," said Many Dog Hides. "But we are a dying people and have to fight for survival, as we have done for about 500 years."
