* * * * *

Council Member Hunter stated it is important to recognize the value of immigrant and foreign-born residents to the City and to have the proclamations read in Spanish earlier in the meeting. She stated that, along with conversations about systemic racism and social justice, the City should work toward increasing translation services and providing an inclusive system that allows the community to participate in public meetings. She expressed appreciation for speakers' comments and requests, and noted that information and updates on the City's systems transformation work can be found at cityoftacoma.org/transform, while updates on police cases can be found by searching "City of Tacoma use of force". Council Member Hunter concluded by stating she attended a meeting held at Kandle Park and voiced her appreciation for the efforts and input of the people in attendance.

Council Member Ushka thanked attendees for providing comments, restated her commitment to the City's anti-racist work, stated that Council Members are dedicating time and learning together, and noted that progress requires ongoing and hard work. She suggested the City further share and get input on the City Council's Legislative Agenda and City Manager's weekly reports on the City's transformation process. She encouraged mask wearing, noted that COVID-19 cases were lower than in July, and that air quality was poor due to wildfire smoke. She further stated it is Suicide Prevention Month and suggested community members reach out to others, noting that COVID-19 has disconnected everyone. She concluded by expressing gratitude for all first responders for their work with COVID-19 and fires and reminded everyone to get a flu shot.

Council Member Walker thanked attendees for providing comments and suggested programs for the City Council to consider as the City works on systems transformation; stated her commitment to work leading towards an anti-racist City; and highlighted the weekly reports from City staff on transformation work, where the City is headed, and how it will get there. She further stated she will conduct coffee chats on Zoom as part of her personal commitment to increase dialogue with the community. She noted that City staff will provide an update on the body worn camera timeline and that the City Manager has provided an update on housing. She concluded by inquiring about the Community's Police Advisory Committee, requesting additional community input on the budget, and noting that the City Council will receive a draft of the budget on October 6, 2020.

Council Member Beale thanked attendees for providing comments and discussed the "de-fund the police" movement and appropriate response. He further acknowledged the current climate crisis, and inquired about Revised Code of Washington 35.18.110 and language in the City Charter that addresses the City Manager form of government and City employees. He concluded by urging everyone who attended to stay involved in the process.

Council Member Thoms thanked attendees for providing comments, stated that anti-racist transformation is not a solitary endeavor by any one Council Member but the work of the entire City Council, and that he is eager and ready to begin the work. He further stated that the public comment period is important as a safe place to have these conversations; and stated he was pleased that several things brought up by speakers can be put into action, such as weekly feedback on transformation efforts, more funding for Neighborhood and Community Services, changing funding for the Homeless Outreach Team, creating a review board, and having survey feedback by district. Council Member Thoms concluded by encouraging more people to participate in the budget exercise when it is reopened, and stating that the City needs to create an environment where people feel respected, cared for, and treated as everyone wants to be treated.

He thanked attendees for providing comments; described how, as a teacher, seeing barriers that students face has formed his views; and further discussed that the meaning of a safe community should be part of a community conversation because it covers a full range of topics, including police, housing, jobs, and education. Council Member Hines concluded by inquiring whether public input would be included in the search for a new Police Chief, agreeing with Council Member Ushka's comments that his commitment goes beyond meetings, and inviting community members to contact him with any concerns or topics they would like to discuss.

Council Member McCarthy expressed appreciation for a robust Community Forum, announced in relation to Suicide Prevention Month that suicide cases are up in the community, and provided a phone number that people can call for help. He further acknowledged institutional racism in the City, White privilege, implicit bias and racism in policing against the Black community across the nation and in the City, the reckless and unnecessary deaths of Black men and people of color at the hands of the police, and that many community members do not trust the police. He stated support for the reformation and transformation of the TPD and the entire City organization as outlined in Resolution No. 40622; justice for victims of police brutality; working to ensure every family in the City feels safe in Tacoma; and discussed steps such as implementation of the "8 Can't Wait" policies, investing in body worn cameras, changing how public safety calls are responded to, implementing independent investigations of the use of deadly force, and revising union contracts related to police officer discipline and termination. He concluded by stating his commitment to this work and to be an ally to the community as well as those who wear the police uniform, and pledged support to victims of crime in the City.

Deputy Mayor Blocker thanked community members for their passion and stated that everyone is committed to this work, though they may have different perspectives, outlooks, and ideas; and further stated that the work regarding racial justice and transformation is expensive and the City has limited resources to transform Tacoma into a city that is safe for all residents. He stated he is committed to working with community members to help them figure out who to contact for different issues, and listed examples of issues that prevents the City Council from taking action. He concluded by reiterating that the Mayor, City Council, and City staff are committed to making real change; everyone recognizes that racial disparities exist; and there is a need for systemic change, more resources to address homelessness, and faster, more effective, and efficient ways to address environmental issues.

Mayor Woodards thanked everyone for participating and sharing their thoughts; and stated the City Council believes in the work that they are doing and understands that transformation must happen. She reminded everyone that the City Council has been working on community-centered leadership and that more information will be available in the next few weeks.
