Tuesday, March 13, 2018

U.S. Department of Health and Human Services

200 Independence Avenue Southwest

[Laura Trueman, Principal Deputy Director]

Present: Beale, Hunter, McCarthy, Mello, Ushka and Mayor Woodards

Council Members discussed work being undertaken in Tacoma to combat the community's opioid epidemic, including convening a community summit and county-wide task force, submission of a grant application to the National League of Cities Mayor's Institute on Opioids, and community distribution by the Tacoma Fire Department of opioid overdose rescue kits. Council Members also spoke of the need to increase public awareness about prevention and treatment and to expand medication-assisted treatment.

U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) staff including, Laura Trueman, Principal Deputy Director; Kathryn Bell, Policy Analyst; Darcie Johnston, Special Assistant, Intergovernmental Affairs; and Daniel Barber, Policy and External Affairs Advisor, Opioids, described funding available to help communities address their needs. Ms. Trueman noted that rural areas, such as West Virginia and Indiana, are of particular emphasis. Staff invited Tacoma to help HHS collect data and stories on successful recovery and treatment, and to help them understand the challenges of collecting data.
